

A method of manufacturing a slag carriage bowl includes preparation of a mold and its subsequent filling with liquid metal, relates to the metallurgy, namely to the foundry engineering and can be used for manufacture of bowls intended for liquid molten slag transportation.