

The proposed method of the photogrammetric survey of an underground excavation consists in illuminating the excavation, photographing the excavation over its cross-section, and carrying out the office studies of the photographs obtained in such a manner. To illuminate the excavation, fiber lightguides without coating are used. The end surfaces of the lightguides are coupled with self-contained lighting units.