

Device for automated balancing of flexible rotors with changing debalance is arranged as cylindrical chamber that is partially filled with liquid. The chamber is separated with partitions in radial direction, those form several chambers (vessels). At that the chambers are connected to each other with narrow channel at whole inner surface of cylinder.