

A method for removal of liquid from a well includes injection to the well of working solution of commercial surfactant amount of which is determined with account of amount of liquid in the stem of the well and solvent of the product SAS. Prior to injection of working solution of the commercial surfactant it is prepared with account of amount of liquid, at that total volume of the commercial surfactant is calculated by formula.