

Method of combustion of non-interchangeable combustible gases includes supplying several combustible gases through separate pipelines to a gas burner unit, mixing these gases and creating conditions for efficient combustion of gases.