

The invention relates to the solid combustible matters, in particular to dry fuel containing urotropine (hexamethylene diamine), paraffin or calcium stearate, and additionally contains glycerin monostearate. The technical result consists in increasing of fire security level, reduction of dry fuel susceptibility for moisture absorption, and more strength of pellets at the expense of envelope formed by glycerin monostearate.